History

Members of the Tongva and Juaneño/Luiseño nations long inhabited this area. After the 1769 expedition of Gaspar de Portolà, a Spanish expedition led by Father Junipero Serra named the area Vallejo de Santa Ana (Valley of Saint Anne). On November 1, 1776, Mission San Juan Capistrano became the area's first permanent European settlement in Alta California, New Spain.

In 1801, the Spanish Empire granted 62,500 acres (253 km<sup>2</sup>) to Jose Antonio Yorba, which he named Rancho San Antonio. Yorba's great rancho included the lands where the cities of Olive, Orange, Villa Park, Santa Ana, Tustin, Costa Mesa and Newport Beach stand today. Smaller ranchos evolved from this large rancho including the Rancho Santiago de Santa Ana.

After the Mexican-American war, Alta California became part of the United States and American settlers arrived in this area. Columbus Tustin, a carriage maker from Northern California, founded the city in the 1870s on 1,300 acres (5 km<sup>2</sup>) of land from the former Rancho Santiago de Santa Ana. The city was incorporated in 1927 with a population of about 900. The townsite was bordered by Camino Real on the south, Newport Avenue on the east, 1st Street on the north, & the Costa Mesa Freeway on the east. During World War II, a Navy anti-submarine airship base (later to become a Marine Corps helicopter station) was established in unincorporated land south of the city; the two dirigible hangars are among the largest wooden structures ever built and are listed on the National Register of Historic Places and ASCE List of Historic Civil Engineering Landmarks. Suburban growth after the war resulted in increased population, annexation of nearby unincorporated land including the base, and development of orchards and farmland into housing tracts and shopping malls.

Geography

Tustin is located at 33°44′23″N 117°48′49″W﻿ / ﻿33.73972°N 117.81361°W﻿ / 33.73972; -117.81361.<sup>[8]</sup> According to the United States Census Bureau, the city has a total area of 11.1 square miles (28.7 km<sup>2</sup>)

It is bordered by Irvine on the south and east, Orange and the census designated Tustin Foothills on the north, and Santa Ana on the west.

Climate

Government

Local

The Tustin City Council is composed of five members elected at large; the Mayorship rotates among the council members and is primarily a ceremonial role.

Mayor Charles E. "Chuck" Puckett was elected to the Tustin City Council in November 2012. His colleagues appointed him Mayor Pro Tem in 2013 and Mayor in 2014. John Nielsen was appointed as Mayor Pro Tem in 2014. Rebecca "Beckie" Gomez, Al Murray and Dr. Allan Bernstein also serve on the City Council as councilmembers.<sup>[3]</sup>

Local politics in the late 1990s and early 2000s have been dominated by the 1997 closure of the local Marine Corps Air Station and plans for subsequent commercial development of the land, including an unsuccessful bid by neighboring Santa Ana to build a school on the land, part of which is within Santa Ana Unified School District's territory.

Emergency services

Fire protection in Tustin is provided by the Orange County Fire Authority with ambulance service by Doctor's Ambulance. Law enforcement is provided by the Tustin Police Department.

State and federal

In the California State Legislature, Tustin is in the 37th Senate District, represented by Republican John Moorlach, and in the 68th Assembly District, represented by Republican Don Wagner.<sup>[16]</sup>

In the United States House of Representatives, Tustin is in California's 45th congressional district, represented by Republican Mimi Walters.<sup>[17]</sup>

Education

Primary and secondary education in Tustin and surrounding unincorporated areas is overseen by the Tustin Unified School District. Tustin High School is a California Distinguished School, as is Foothill High School (Santa Ana, California). Tustin High School is also well-known regionally for its strong Model

United Nations program. Many university-bound high school graduates attend nearby University of California, Irvine.
