I just made a trip to the California State capital to distribute boxes of geoengineering awareness materials (magazine copies, commercial DVDs, and color glossy flyers) to every office of every representative and senator. I also distributed to every committee, this is the sixth time I have done this. Those at the capital now know about climate engineering, and they now know we know they know. On the 5th anniversary of the catastrophic Japanese quake, how many Americans have completely forgotten about Fukushima? How many Americans have assumed that everything is now under control regarding the nuclear accident that occurred on that fateful day 5 years ago? Such a conclusion could not be further from the truth. In fact, the situation at Fukushima is worse than ever. "Tepco" (the company that owns the Fukushima nuclear power plant) and the Japanese government knew on day one there were total meltdowns occurring in multiple reactors, they did everything they could to hide the truth. The real truth about Fukushima is this, the technology to deal with this catastrophe does not even exist, and we are building dozens more nuclear plants right now. Governments around the globe and the agencies they control are tasked with hiding countless converging catastrophes that are closing in from every side. How does the story end? What will be our individual parts in the play? Will we sit passively by and tell ourselves someone somewhere is watching the horizon and thus watching out for our welfare? Or we will accept the fact that such a notion is a total delusion? We must focus on the following fact, from nuclear meltdown to climate engineering, if the current course of certain suicide for planet Earth and the human race is to be changed, Download video the current trajectory the sand in the hourglass is running out rapidly, what will each of us do to help in the battle to alter the outcome before it is carved in stone.

Very well said JR. Most people are sitting on the Fence and are in Denial of the Muggy Mess above and when they get sick, then they complain. When someone dies from the aerial spraying they don't even question why. Might as well put their head up their butt if they can't fathom what is going on. Good for you JR. Good to see Paul hasn't given up also.

Thank you Dane for delivering your materials to congress/senate SIX times!!!! I wonder what it will take to get a rise out of them....you more than any other have been incredibly persevering and proactive. Your selfless efforts are a radiant light during these dim aerosolized days.

I am turning to Ganesha, the Hindu elephant God/miracle worker/remover of obstacles/obstructions. Ganesha can remove any obstacle and make anything go more smoothly...I loved him for years (and also Neem Karoli Baba, whom Marc speaks so highly of)...Meditating and reading about these 2 holy ones brought so much joy. These two might help lend their awesome power to get things moving in the geoengineering exposures...worth a try and a focus (probably sounds a little crazy, but it never hurts to enlist the aid of the sacred realms).

And yes, surely the disappearing honeybees are victimized as much by the aluminum sprays as by the neonicotinoids, or more so. Thank you. Hardly anything in our world is untouched by the spraying. I often find honeybees in my area wandering dazed in circles.

From Southwest, N.M.USA inundated with Chemtrails, not Contrails, a different monster coming in mostly from West 3-15-16 all day. They are big time into spraying from North to South as well. People who come here and read and don't post, this is for you!!! Over the sky in Las Cruces, N.M. really bad. The masses still in a trance thinking what they see up there in later part of day that those are clouds up there, gimminy whiskers man!? My neighbors big pine trees of many years are browned out and dried, dead I'm sure practically overnight. That gentleman of that residence died of prostate cancer. We're breathing these dung works, our little ones, pets, animals, etc., and our reps. are all to complacent and gullible of what they are fed. They in all reality we know by now care not for their constituents and are only pawns, military included. Also, many more so-called higher ups as they perceive themselves above all the rest of us will answer to a Higher Being, please don't doubt. They are but mere man. We all have free will on this earth but we here choose to do right and be good stewards of it, everything included on it!!! Peace be with you.....

They are chasing the tail of the nuclear dragon. One thing that worries me most is that it takes a lot of power to keep the water pumping to the radioactive rods to keep them cool. What happens if we have an EMP, a terrorist attack, an oil shortage that shuts down commerce – A million different scenarios could happen that would render those pumps dead after all of the reserve emergency power is spent. There are thousands of those plants, and nuclear waste storage sites across the country. One day, there just might not be enough people to keep them running. We have killers ourselves and our planet 1000 times over, and we barely even know it.

Biophotons: The Human Body Emits, Communicates with, and is Made from Light

Sayer Ji, GreenMedInfo / Aug. 26, 2014

Increasingly science agrees with the poetry of direct human experience: we are more than the atoms and molecules that make up our bodies, but beings of light as well. Biophotons are emitted by the human body, can be released through mental intention, and may modulate fundamental processes within cell-to-cell communication and DNA. ...

The Physical and "Mental" Eye Emits Light

The eye itself, which is continually exposed to ambient powerful photons that pass through various ocular tissues, emit spontaneous and visible light-induced ultraweak photon emissions. It has even been hypothesized that visible light induces delayed bioluminescence within the exposed eye tissue, providing an explanation for the origin of the negative afterimage.

These light emissions have also been correlated with cerebral energy metabolism and oxidative stress within the mammalian brain.

Our Cells and DNA Use Biophotons To Store and Communicate Information

Apparently biophotons are used by the cells of many living organisms to communicate, which facilitates energy/information transfer that is several orders of magnitude faster than chemical diffusion.

 Scientific Research from Institutions in Iran and Canada:*

Emission of Mitochondrial Biophotons and their Effect on Electrical Activity of Membrane via Microtubules

Abstract

In this paper we argue that, in addition to electrical and chemical signals propagating in the neurons of the brain, signal propagation takes place in the form of biophoton production. This statement is supported by recent experimental confirmation of photon guiding properties of a single neuron. We have investigated the interaction of mitochondrial biophotons with microtubules from a quantum mechanical point of view. Our theoretical analysis indicates that the interaction of biophotons and microtubules causes transitions/fluctuations of microtubules between coherent and incoherent states. A significant relationship between the fluctuation function of microtubules and alpha-EEG diagrams is elaborated on in this paper. We argue that the role of biophotons in the brain merits special attention.

Introduction

All living cells of plants, animals and humans continuously emit ultraweak biophotons (ultraweak electromagnetic waves) in the optical range of the spectrum, which is associated with their physiological states and can be measured using special equipment. Neural cells also continuously emit biophotons. The intensity of biophotons is in direct correlation with neural activity, cerebral energy metabolism, EEG activity, cerebral blood flow and oxidative processes.

2. Biophoton Production Mechanism inside Neurons

During natural metabolic processes taking place in diverse living organism, permanent and spontaneous ultraweak biophoton emission has been observed without any external excitation. The emergence of biophotons is due to the bioluminescent radical and non-radical reactions of Reactive Oxygen Species (ROS) and Reactive Nitrogen Species (RNS), and involves simple cessation of excited states. The main source of biophotons derives from the oxidative metabolism of mitochondria.

Neurons also incessantly emit biophotons.

4.1 An Overview

We strongly believe that electrodynamic interactions between various cytoskeletal structures, with MTs playing a central role, and ion channels crucially regulate the neural information-processing mechanism. These interactions involve long-range ionic wave propagation along microtubule networks (MTNs) and AFs and exhibit subcellular control of ionic channel activity. Hence, they have an impact on the computational capabilities of the entire neural function. Cytoskeletal biopolymers, most importantly AFs and MTs, constitute the basis for wave propagation, and interact with membrane components leading to a modulation of synaptic connections and membrane ion channels.

The idea that HAARP can produce sound is reasonable because heating the Ionosphere is a plasma technology related to Ion Acoustic Waves and Langmuir Waves:

There is a similarity between plasma and sound. Plasma and sound can be interchangeable. Plasma is the most abundant material in the universe. A large variety of waves exist in plasma [Space Physics/MB Kallenrode].

Magnetohydrodynamic Waves: Magnetohydrodynamic waves are low-frequency waves related to the motion of the plasma's ion component. They can be understood intuitively from the concepts of magnetic pressure and magnetic tension. In a magneto-sonic wave, compression of field lines creates a magnetic pressure pulse, which propagates perpendicular to the field in the same way an ordinary pressure pulse propagates through a gas in a sound wave.

...the maximum speed of a disturbance propagating along the magnetic field can be compared with the speed of sound in a gas.

Magneto-Sonic Waves: A magneto-sonic wave is similar to a sound wave: it is a longitudinal wave parallel to the magnetic field with alternating regions of compression and rarefaction (rarefied/lessening of density) in both the plasma and in the magnetic field.

Ion-Acoustic Waves: Sound waves are pressure waves. They transport momentum from one layer to the next due to collisions between molecules and atoms. Despite its often low-density, in a plasma a similar phenomenon exists.

These are some of Professor Don Gurnett's favorite sounds of space, recorded by University of Iowa instruments on a variety of spacecraft over the past 50 years.

California admits to geoengineering. Been doing it since the 50's this article claims. now that they have damaged the weather systems and the whole planet. now they have a solution to "sell" for a price. love how they say the damage to the environment from the chemicals is minimal as it is so small of an amount. yeah right. small amount spread over the whole globe day after day after day. it has reached a saturation level. Even a small amount of rat poison will kill you if you consume it every day. that is what they would have people believe.

Yet another way to cover their tracks and come out looking like a "hero" to the brain dead masses.

Hello Teri, unfortunately many have taken the bait on the media mention of the small scale weather modification programs. These programs are only used as a means of distracting the population and thus helping to hide the real elephant in the room, global geoengineering. In regard to the true state of the climate, the damage is real and now irreparable in any time frame that matters. If we can expose and halt the climate engineering insanity (and the ongoing list of other sources of damage to the climate system), we may yet be able to salvage what is left of Earth's life support systems. Again, the small scale weather modification programs are meaningless in the bigger picture context and are only being used as a "red herring".

Oddly enough, if the turn-outs for Donald Trump rallies are any indication of anything, there are apparently hundreds of thousands of American citizens for whom a fully functioning "half of a brain" shall remain well beyond their wildest dreams. Can you believe this shit? Rachel Maddow's now famous recent expose of the Trump camp's structured agenda suggests that possibly, and I stress possibly, that our shadow government may be using him to foment the very kinds of magnified distraction that the power structure requires to keep national and world attention drawn away from the omnicide in progress. However, Trump is all by himself an attention addict. He thrives on it and craves it like a bluegrass musician (me) craves cocaine. (that was long ago) His handlers are, I'm sure, probably pretty damn good at orchestrating his tours and rhetoric for maximum soundbite and videobite exposure in their effort to trump up (pun intended) his royal majesty's visage. Merriam-Webster's definition of "trump up" is: "to concoct especially with intent to deceive." Sounds just about right, doesn't it?

As I gaze upon footage of the crowds and their behavior at Trump rallies, I am struck by the astounding similarity to video footage of crowds I have seen at Monster Truck shows, you know, those shows where ordinary pick-up trucks rigged with 10 ft. tall tires send crowds into orgasmic frenzies by driving right over the tops of rows of derelict automobiles, thus installing the brain virus into the culture that people who drive pick-up trucks are more powerful and somehow superior to people who drive ordinary sedans. The prevailing consciousness at Trump rallies would appear to be also very similar to what little I've seen of what goes on at WWF (wrestle mania) events. Is Donald Trump essentially a pro-wrestler in a suit? And in case you lost the memo, pro wrestlers and their entire performance in the ring are all faked. Could this not be said to be equally true of Trump's performances in the political arena?

I considered going to the recent Trump rally in St. Louis with a large sign reading: Stop Geoengineering Our Skies. Only problem with that would have been that no one there would have heard of the word "geoengineering", or even how to pronounce it, and I may have ended up being viewed as some sort of threat and summarily thrown out or worse.

In response to Paul V.'s comment, just recently mainstream tv media showed a picture of GW Bush and Hillary Clinton(aka the Hilldebeast) all smiles and hugging one another in a tender embrace. For what purpose I'm not sure- but the real take away for those awake (and at least for me) was that these two clearly work for the same bosses and are not opposed in political policy whatsoever. They are both on the same team- and that team is NOT OUR TEAM.

The political theatre is nauseatingly obvious to those of us with eyes to see. At this point I think we would be better off with no government at all (or at least the minimal framework with which it was originally designed to be) – just letting people work out their differences man to man. It certainly couldn't be any WORSE than what we are experiencing now. (I'd be willing to give it a try) Government seems to be the CAUSE of the majority of our woes; conspiring with bloodsucking multinational criminal corporations in the plundering of everything from all precious natural resources to the wealth of middle class populations, no matter how meager they may be. The whole farce is truly nauseating. I don't like any of the presidential candidates. None of them represent me.

On Friday up here in Maine, we had a break from spraying and the sky was deep blue and the clouds were absolutely beautiful... the air was fresh and crisp. It's amazing that you can really notice a difference. Yesterday, however, the weather was nice in the morning and they started spraying non-stop all day and by late afternoon the sun was completely "dimmed out". It really looked like SRM "global dimming" but they kept going into the evening.... WHY?? Isn't that such a waste of their toxic resources and not to mention all of the fuel used spraying continuously into the night?? How can that be SRM?? It's terrible but even more I noticed for the first time yesterday that spray was not white but DARK GRAY in color! What is that?? It left dirty soot-like lines in the sky... has anyone else noticed this??

Here is something I found helpful during my musings in consideration of integrative/"alternative" medicine after a conversation (that went nowhere) with my M.D. earlier this week, and when I went to find the etymological differentiation between the words "holistic" and "wholistic," so I could write properly about that in an earlier posting here today. This is the Steadman's medical dictionary 4th edition definition of health as found in a helpful article posted on the website of the Bozeman, MT, Wellness Center, about wholistic health:

"Let us start by looking at the definition of health as defined by Steadman's concise medical Dictionary, 4th edition: A state characterized by anatomical, physiological, and psychological integrity. The ability to perform personally valued family, work, and community roles; the ability to deal with physical, biological, psychological and social stress; a feeling of well-being; and freedom from the risk of disease and untimely death." (source article here: http://bozemanmagazine.com/articles/2012/06/30/20263_holistic-vs-wholistic) "Untimely death..." hmmm...

I started out with the intention of understanding the difference between two homonyms (a homonym is a word pronounced the same as another but with a different meaning— boy, I just can't believe I'm 3 units shy of a double major in music performance and English lit...!), "holistic" and "wholistic," but between this need to understand simple words and the experience I had talking to my physician, hearing that she had never heard of Physicians for Social Responsibility, I found a much deeper issue there, that of the need for a much greater understanding of a much larger definition of HEALTH on Planet Earth in general, and by the HEALING COMMUNITY in specific. I therefore throw this challenge at all you healers out there, you CNAs, LVNs, RNs, physician's assistants and M.D.s, (come to think of it, the patients, too) and I'd like to see more of a discussion on this subject.

The old Latin saying goes "Mens sana in corpore sano," so, extrapolating this further, a la globalism, we need to understand:

HOW CAN YOU HAVE A HEALTHY HUMAN BEING/Animal/Plant/forest/river/plain/ocean, while they either ignorantly choose or are forced to live in ANY KIND OF POLLUTED ENVIRONMENT?

"Safe" levels of ionizing radiation— REEEALLY?? Or fluoride, lead, mercury in our drinking water, or nano-particulate toxic metals we're being blasted with from above, found in off-the-charts levels in our water, snow, soil, and body tissues?? Where'd those come from?? And WHAT ARE WE GONNA DO ABOUT STOPPING IT? WHEN??

Good evening my fellow planet/home dwellers.

Gracious sakes, where do "I" start in lui of the comments already submitted in this article/broadcast. Well, I've already made up my mind where I will start, "Marc!", that's where! Good God man, you have a way with words. And your recent post is of no new news to "me". Bravo!! We all wonder what each of us is like in "real life". Some are able to express it outwardly, wear it on our sleeve so to speak. You, I and many others on this sight are of similar character. (How do ya think we ended up here?, wink). Marc, I commend you, you have given the problem, the scenario, and the solution all in one fell. You have the rath you wish for laying at your feet and don't even see it. And that "rath" is this, When "they can no longer control us, "they" will be devastated. My friend, we need not ask anymore than that. Seeing "them" rome the streets in destitution will be testimony to "their" ways, their failed ways. Vengeance is mine sayeth the Lord. Well how about "we" give that chore to "nature"? And when we do, we'd better hang on, it's gonna be a hell of a ride!! The best rides are never "easy" as most folks on fakebook would want it. Marc and ALL, this column of comments is bound to be one of the biggest in Dane's GW site history. I find it very intriguing that John Lennon and George Harrison are at play in this column. They both and many others of their time tried to explain what a better world would look like, how we need to get there and how to weed the garden so "we" can have it. Where did the bumper stickers go that said, "question authority". I also find it greatly profound that Jacques Cousteau's name is in play here also. Like Dane and many others, I consumed every word he said. "I believed him". As a kid I could hardly wait for his next TV episode. Not a morsel was wasted in my mind. Where do we go in the future? What will ours look like? How will society revolve? I say, "let's all take the Nestea Plunge"! Someone posted a "newsroom" video of a "scientist" on a TV station. Wow, knock me over, so that's what an honest scientist would sound like. I wrote about the matrix of a herd of horses and how closely their lifestyle is to what we as humans yet need to accomplish. From my stand point, we have all the players in place. Marc, Dennie and several others here are the centurions of awareness and protection. Susan and her similar respondents are the the lead horse. "The meek shall inherit the earth"... Who 'are' these "meek"? Time will tell. I tell you what though, it ain't gonna be the power structure. Brilliant minds that think about the good of the many will prevail in the "end of days". Of this I have no doubt. Natural law is an organic and wonderful thing. Natural law will have the final words in our existence. Doesn't matter who re-quoted it, the fact remains. There is nothing new under the Sun. Please, let us remember this and not give in to EGO. Let us rediscover the ways that once helped this earth flourish and be bountiful for "all". And Marc(yes I'm picking on you tonight) you mentioned several well known deities and stated you fall short of grace. "I" say you have not! Though your feelings of punishment for those guilty of our planets destruction is lacking only a few "turn points". On a personal note for you. I once was the care taker for 7 country cemeteries. Some of the most peaceful times in my life. The wild life was abundant and the solitude was enriching.

Does anyone else besides me feel "the quickening"?

If "we" do not have a destination, how will we get anywhere? Keep looking for the path, "the middle path". Walk it with confidence!

People should be VERY, VERY scared, GeoEngineering could be leading to a true massive kill by the Central Bankers / Oligarchs / Globalists, since it very well maybe that once mammal tissue reaches a certain saturation point with these metals they are spraying, the Central Bankers / Oligarchs / Globalists will bring out a frequency vibration weapon which will vibrate the exact frequency needed to vibrate and heat these metals up in the tissue that has absorbed them, thus destroying it at a microscopic level, causing a mass murdering of a Yuge number of people all at once.

Think the Central Bankers / Oligarchs / Globalists won't do it? The think again, they want 6.5 Billion people dead globally, and already etched this, which is their prime directive, into the Georgia GuideStones to let their plan be known. Of course, they will have apparatus to shield themselves from this weapon at the time they unleash it on everyone else.

However, I'm thinking that God, if we help, will annihilate the Central Bankers / Oligarchs / Globalists before they can do this. Key words here are: "if we help".

To Everyone:

I have had ringing in my ears for some time now. Night sweats began a couple of months ago.

I found that all it takes is a CT Scan. My wife is a RN she noticed what she thought was a swelling in my neck. She demanded that I go to the ER and get examined. I received a CT Scan, as soon as I came out of there I noticed a change in my head. They think that I have some type of Dementia. I now have pressure between my temples, it feels like the beginning of a headache. Now they want me to see the Neurologist. I will never have a MRI. I can't imagine what that will do to the rest of my brain. I feel that this is one of the reasons that the message does not spread. Remember never put your cell phone to your ear or any kind of headset or earpiece.

From what I have read the cell phone towers are WAY over powered. My mind is fried on the technical details, so you will have to research this. There are UTube videos, as well as websites that investigate this. Already the earth is enveloped in a microwave "fog." Which is to suggest we reside in a microwave oven. Full power has not yet been applied. Once our bodies are saturated with the appropriate levels of nano-metal, the machine combo of Nexrad, GWEN, cell, ionospheric heaters, and unknowns in existence, combined at full power might do some physical damage to all life. Drones, smart cars, aircraft, power plants, submarines, robots, hospital care, shopping, smart cards, RFID, snooping cameras, even billboards, every moment of our lives is being seduced into being remotely controlled by wireless microwave beamed energy. As long as we consume we are welcome on planet earth. Stop consuming, ie not spending money because most people are broke, and we are of no value to the rapidly encroaching burgeoning artificial silicon intelligence creation. Net: for catching "fish." Web: for entanglement of victim.

I agree but in all fairness when Guy is already spelling doom for the Co2 and methane in the atmosphere alone which hasn't reached maximum heating why would he change his tune for a positive message if climate engineering was acknowledged or halted? I just think he finally realized what Dane has been saying is all true and he wants to act like he figured it out I mean he thinks he's funny while I find his humor about what's occurring on the planet unfit I will admit it is a little funny just to see everyone going about life with no idea not even the slightest clue there whole world is crumbling around them by the minute. FYI: Here's the link to the January 10, 2016 edition of The Lifeboat Hour from Progressive Radio Network with life coach host Carolyn Baker, Ph.D., titled "Full Spectrum Living with Death in Mind" with guest Dean Spillane Walker, about "the most important actions that awake individuals can take in 2016 to navigate the incoming chaos." <http://prn.fm/the-lifeboat-hour-01-10-16/&nbpsp>; Dean's book and workshops are about how to "offer the participant a safe container in which to cultivate optimal presence in the face of our global challenges..."

A "safe container..." REALLY?

As Artie Johnson would say: "N-i-i-i-c-e... but SCHTOOOO-piddt!!!"

Is there ANY PLACE ON EARTH that could possibly be "safe" from the consequences of the unfeeling, insane actions of the psychopaths we've allowed into the control room for so long now??

Other than completely "getting" it and putting an immediate STOP to all of the madness on the part of those perpetrating it, HOW in Hell is any kind of "training" in ANYTHING going to save any of us??

I especially have a problem with the nice, tidy intellectual discussions of the BEAUTY of the melt down, including another impending world war and worse that's sure to come, that occur so very often on this and similar shows. Reality is, these people are turning a profit on the misery!!!

(This is a sequel to the show she did in 2014 with guest Guy McPherson that was titled "Extinction Dialogues: How To Live With Death In Mind.")

The sad reality about THE CHURCH today is if they are not hypocritical they would have no following. Basically these institutions across the board are politics hiding behind the Christ blood guilt. They wave the cross and the flags in synch, as if the true sermon on the mount has anything in common with such a synthesis. The symbol of the Sacrifice has merged itself into infinite war, determined to invoke divine rapture for themselves. Mega churches, pied pipers, the late great non-stewards of God's creation. And what does Christ say to these? "Begone, for I know ye not."

How no matter how dark it looks on the horizon we will never give up and how these dire issues of our time are uniting us like never before, a bond that cannot be broken.

I have struggled for so long with the feeling of 'aloneness'. Discarded by my own children and some extended family members. I feel I am one of the lucky ones though because I have two wonderful brothers who are awake and extremely intelligent. We stay in touch much more now than in recent years, I shared this with them in hopes they would feel the same emotion that I did when I closed my eyes and listened to it for the first time. I pray for careful watch over my brothers souls and hope to raise a glass of wine with them together someday, we are separated by miles only. We are all brothers and sisters in this together, I raise my glass to you for sending this my way. Thank you.

You are all very welcome. Stay strong friends and Rebecca, that's great to hear about your brothers, unfortunate about the rest of your family but I understand, trust me. My father is obsessed with mainstream science and refuses to acknowledge critical issues like Geoengineering and Fukushima, calling both a conspiracy theory. It hurts to see my mother suffering from Lupus which, I know to a large degree, climate engineering is responsible for yet she continues to deny reality and always sides with my Father. I have both love and sorrow for them to be so broken by the system not to be able to look outside the walls it erected for them. Although, I am lucky to have friends who listen and a girlfriend who cares to hear and not ridicule. I am working on gathering people for a meetup on April 23, 2016. I broke the "applause meter" clapping for this current Global Alert News radio show. Incredible connection of a wide array of dots. Bravo to Dane Wigington once again. Wow!

Alright, I'm gonna spill my guts about something now. Some of you will roll your eyes and question just who or what this guy "Marc" actually is. When I was much younger I somehow found my way to Ram Dass, formerly Dr. Richard Alpert of Harvard. (circa 1971) Through his incredible experiences with his Guru in India, Neem Karoli Baba, I ultimately had my own mind and heart completely captured and blown by Baba, or Maharaj-ji as we all call him, right around 1981. Right from the start, I knew Baba had left his body in 1973. But it was on 9/11/2001 that I realized the mysterious and mind-boggling significance of the fact that Baba died in the wee hours of 9/11/1973. I don't expect anyone here to grok the Guru thing, or be sympathetic to what I'm sharing here. But I speak only from the heart now about what has been, and still is, an extremely deep and impossible-to-describe relationship with a Being of profound simplicity and such radiating Love. Maharaj-ji absolutely chose the exact day and time that he would leave his body. (mahasamadhi, the "great" samadhi, or "merging with God") Knowing what I know now and have known and experienced with Maharaj-ji for almost 40 years, there is no one who can convince me that his passing on 9/11/1973 does not carry a profound message to those of us still here post "9/11". 9/11/2001, as Dane now openly discusses, has demonstrated to the world just how far and deep corruption and unfettered evil has taken root in certain strata of the human "family". We could not possibly have understood any special significance to the date of Maharaj-ji's passing back before "our own 9/11". But now I see excruciatingly clearly that we were being left a coded message as it were. And the message is simple, actually: "Be aware of Evil in this world, but love people, serve people and remember God." As impossible and naive as this sounds to many in today's world, I absolutely wouldn't have seen any future for humankind unless and until such admonitions as these can flourish in men's hearts. Having said that, I am fallible. I openly admit it. I ain't perfect and I ain't no fking saint. In fact, while my own "brand" of spirituality does subsume into itself much of Maharaj-ji's essence, I depart, one might say, from saintliness (lol) because I am a staunch proponent of kicking the asses of Evil wherever it may be encountered. I differ from Ghandi and MLK in this regard, not to mention Christ and Gautama Buddha and Ramana Maharshi and countless others. Maybe if I were genuinely enlightened I'd not be advocating kicking the asses of geoeengineers and Illuminati/banker scumsacks anymore. But I ain't. Enlightened, that is. So for now, I openly call for immediately deposing the kings and queens, princes and princesses of the so-called motherfking Illuminati/banker/military/industrial complex. I will not shed one solitary tear for the bulk of them should they all be instantly vaporized by the intensity of their own heartlessness. For if Maharaj-ji was "about" anything, he was about heart....and love. And caring for one another. Oh yeah, I guess if I have to I will try to "love my enemies" and all of that. I kind of get how that can be a powerful and deep spiritual practice. But has it not become abundantly clear that we are on the precipice of annihilation because those at the top of the food chain act only through their malodorous ambitions and lust for superiority, rather than through a recognition of the sanctity of our biosphere and the need to prioritize it's sustainability?

Amy Alkon's blog at <http://www.advicegoddess.com> invites people to contribute links to pertinent internet material, so I've been sending in links related to geoengineering. She has a large and faithful readership.

If you're not familiar with ms Alkon, she writes a relationship advice column, but she has a political agenda, also, and it's not especially gummint-friendly... especially after she was sexually assaulted during an 'enhanced' frisk by an airport TSA agent. She went public with the agent's name, and was sued in return for defamation. The legal wrangling was arduous and traumatic, but she won the case, thanks entirely to a sympathetic attorney who took her case for free.

I sent in the link to Dane's "Irrefutable" video of jets in the process of spraying chemicals, and the response was galling-- it seems that no matter how 'irrefutable' the proof is of aerial spraying, anyone who refuses to accept the obvious will find (invent!) a way to refute and deny it. I don't hold it against ms Alkon, but of all the places I expected a positive response, hers was quite a disappointment.

Friday March 11 was the deadline for a candidate to file here in the OC, SoCal. Not sure what it is for other areas, it may be still possible to sign on as a candidate in other areas, and in other states. If so, people who write in here or read here, or know about the climate engineering, should go and sign on as candidates. You can find out when the deadlines are by calling your local registrar of voters. Anybody here would make a better official than those who are in power. Those gutless wonders "don't know what to do?" They don't know what to do! Seriously? It's their job to know what to do, how about suing the federal government? or something similar. I had been thinking of maybe running for something, but was there just to pick up voter registration forms. I know next to nothing about politics but just had the idea knocking around my head. I met some of the candidates running, and gave out flyers and discovered that there was something that is free to run for, it needed 20 signatures and it was too late for me to get them as it was almost 5:00. But there are offices that are free and just need a few signatures. This one was a county office that only meets once a month in the evening, thus you could keep your day job. The person running invited me to come so it is open to the public. It may be more possible for ordinary people to win this year since so many are tired of career politicians. If a statement is needed you could just put you are running on a platform of clean air, water, and energy, or something to that effect. People who know about the climate engineering need to get involved in local politics and if our politicians don't listen to us we need to push them out of office. That way when Dane or some other fine person like him delivers reliable evidence he won't be ignored. We need to get in there and help Dane and not let him fight alone. He needs our help, just like Bernie Sanders needs our help, nobody can do it alone. I support Bernie for many reasons, one of which he is that he is a normal human being not a psychopath or sociopath, unlike most other politicians. And it is rare to have a chance to vote for a non-sociopath. Any normal human would be against the climate engineering programs, so obviously he is against them too, he just can't really talk about it yet. He came out against fracking the other day, was put down for it by a fact checking article, which denied that it was polluting our water supplies, then in the debate he came out against it again, and threw down the gauntlet to Hillary to also be against fracking. He is strong minded, and is talking to the right scientists. You should have seen the look on her face, she was so not happy. If she gets elected it will be business as usual, fracking, drilling, more nuclear power plants, more war in the middle east, etc. If you want real change don't throw away your vote on her. Bernie was the first one to mention climate change as an issue, then Hillary began talking about it. Oh she knows it is going on but her solution will only be to impose more tyranny over citizens here.

I believe he can see now what is going on.

I never saw so many little aircraft here yesterday. Constantly flying around loading the sky up. It makes me wonder if people around here even acknowledge why so many of them are flying around.

There were also many Big Jets up there spraying too.

It's amazing that we have physicians here who've never heard of Physicians for Social Responsibility— they've only been around since some time in the 80s— I'm wondering if these same "educated" people have ever heard the name "Helen Caldicott" or are aware that she is a pediatric oncologist who was on the faculty at the Harvard School of Medicine. On March 7th, the article and video, showing definitive proof of active spraying speaks volumes. However, I started thinking that why can't someone follow in behind (at a very safe distance of course) and capture the particulate stream being sprayed? Conduct an analysis of the particulate and then publish it for all to see. I mean, we have videos of jets spraying and we have lab analysis of what is on the ground and in the rain, right? So, the next step should be to irrefutably connect these two dots by flying into the 'Condensation Trail' and take in samples, while simultaneously running video showing the spraying. Could this be done? Just thinking out loud here.....

Hello CP, your idea has merit of course, and we have long since been examining the undertaking of such a test, but doing it in a manner that would not be rejected in a legal proceeding is not an easy task. In addition, those that refuse to believe the mountain of test data and peer reviewed study we already have, will not believe any form of proof. Our greatest hurdle at this moment is to wake those that are still completely unaware of this dire issue. We already have enough data to file in court which we are working on.

Brisbane, Australia: Very overcast day, patchy rain, which when looking at the BOM map, showed up as scattered rain areas over the South East of Queensland and into northern NSW, basically between Gympie and Yamba. The rest of Queensland is still bone dry. Some rain falls are reported as something extraordinary when they occur, if at all, out west.

The other night a weather reporter explained the "blocking high" in the Tasman sea which is causing the dry weather in mainland Australia, Tasmania and New Zealand. Riiight! It is analogous to the 'Ridiculously Resilient Ridge' west of California.

It will be great for AgriCorp when they buy up broken farms for pennies on the pound. Watch 'The Money Masters' on Youtube by Bill Still. A big documentary by a good man, who gives a lesson in the real history of the modern era, the era of central banking.

"Water and air, the two essential fluids on which all life depends, have become global garbage cans...

The real cure for our environmental problems is to understand that our job is to salvage Mother Nature. We are facing a formidable enemy in this field. It is the hunters... and to convince them to leave their guns on the wall is going to be very difficult...

The road to the future leads us smack into the wall. We simply ricochet off the alternatives that destiny offers. Our survival is no more than a question of 25, 50 or perhaps 100 years."

Jacques Cousteau

"Strange that so few ever come to the woods to see how the pine lives and grows and spires, lifting its evergreen arms to the light, — to see its perfect success; but most are content to behold it in the shape of many broad boards brought to market, and deem that its true success! But the pine is no more lumber than man is, and to be made into boards and houses is no more its true and highest use than the truest use of a man is to be cut down and made into manure. There is a higher law affecting our relation to pines as well as to men. A pine cut down, a dead pine, is no more a pine than a dead human carcass is a man. Can he who has discovered only some of the values of whalebone and whale oil be said to have discovered the true use of the whale? Can he who slays the elephant for his ivory be said to have "seen the elephant"? These are petty and accidental uses; just as if a stronger race were to kill us in order to make buttons and flageolets of our bones; for everything may serve a lower as well as a higher use. Every creature is better alive than dead, men and moose and pine-trees, and he who understands it aright will rather preserve its life than destroy it."

"Most men, it seems to me, do not care for Nature and would sell their share in all her beauty, as long as they may live, for a stated sum — many for a glass of rum. Thank God, men cannot as yet fly, and lay waste the sky as well as the earth! "

Yes. Absolutely perfect. Thank you.

We humans are angry and afraid about what is being done to us but it is nothing more or worse than what we have mindlessly been doing to the earth and massive numbers of other sentient beings for aeons. We even "breed" living, breathing, feeling beings for the purpose of slaughtering them for our appetite or "sport" or vanity, or kidnapping and caging them for our amusement. The abuses are far worse than most people would like to know. We disparage and ridicule (as we here are often disparaged and ridiculed) those who try to wake us to the animals' desperate plight and some states have even instituted gag orders that prevent the filming of some abuses so heinous that their disclosure would likely make vegans of all but the most heartless among us, if we only knew. Or so I would hope.

Now, at the last, we humans know how It feels to be "caged," sickened and slaughtered, and to have no real voice.

Although I have invested a great deal of time and effort in waking people to the toxic mess in the skies, mostly strangers since by all measures I have zero family left, I frequently ask myself if it's worth it. Aside from the alienation in nearly every arena that has resulted, I have doubts as to whether, ultimately, I am acting for good. Even if we are able to save ourselves this time, if humans cannot raise themselves above speciesism along with racism, ageism, sexism, classism, religious differences and all the other isms, and live with genuine and profound respect for the planet and all who exist upon her, in whatever life form a being has chosen, then it will be just a matter of time before this toxic mess repeats itself.

Is it such a stretch to imagine how those behind the scenes in their gilded offices think of most humans as just so many cattle, and the planet like a giant feedlot? A feedlot with some nice resources to be drilled and fracked and dredged?

So I go back and forth, from energetic fearless bursts of enlightening every stranger I encounter, to wishing the poor planet would just end itself in a final, total angry explosion. The ultimate violence to end all violence.

We complain about the violence that is being done to us, that we did not give consent to. But really, how can we complain about others' forms of violence while defending our own violence? I think of the poor dogs in the Iditarod, who are suffering and dying... without their consent. I think of the poor pigs, smarter than dogs, who spend their lives in tiny filthy crates too small to stand or turn in... We must, I think, all practice Ahimsa, to the best of our ability, until every form of violence is uncovered, eradicated and abhorred.

i feel certain that I sound as crazy to some of you, as you do to the people you speak to about geoengineering. That's ok.

And now that I've had my little rant of sorts, I'd like to give a heartfelt thank you to everyone here, esp Dane, who has been a godsend to me for years, and who walks his talk. Some of the rest of you are amazing too and I have learned so much (Susan!) and share your pain and anger. Some of you are like family. I have developed quite a "potty mouth" and can hardly refrain from swearing at the filth in the sky every time I set foot outdoors. I first noticed "something in the air" on the east coast as early as the late 1990's; it bothered my eyes, reduced visibility, made everything look dirty, and made me irritable. My mother noticed it too, when I pointed it out to her. I've been a sky watcher and sky lover since I was very young, long ago. I could not believe the changes I've seen since the early 2000's nor could I believe the apathy and ridicule I encountered when I spoke of them. Finding this site years ago helped keep me sane and feeling less isolated and alone. Some of you are brilliant and/ or soulful writers, some of you are still finding your way; I appreciate every comment. I'm not so sure mine will be appreciated as reference to the plight of our furry brothers and sisters usually brings a lot of unkind remarks but if you are still reading, I ask that you please just give what I've written a moment's consideration. As we see and exploit those who are more vulnerable than ourselves, we are seen and exploited by those more powerful than ourselves. It is a self-feeding loop that must be stopped. I wish you all the best.

When "Someone" continually insists on acting exactly as if "They" OWN ALL the water on this planet, while treating it exactly as if it is "Their" personal W.C., it's hard not to get their sh*t in our mouths– seriously. The truth is: WHENEVER SOMEONE INSISTS ON SHOVING YOUR HEAD UNDER THE WATER THEY ARE FORCING YOU INTO YOUR LOWER-BRAINED SURVIVAL MODE, INCLUDING THE "LOWER-BRAINED" LANGUAGE WE USE.

Then "They" get to pretend that "They" are somehow all "clean" and "holy," never stooping to "such language," leading me to quote the following poem, dedicated to all who still are not outraged by what THEY are doing to us all: Little man so spic-and-span, where were YOU when the $#!t hit the fan?

My 105th email to my contact list, titled; "Isobars not Behaving".

1. As you start to understand what is going on in the skies above us, you will be intrigued by some of the phrases used by news and weather reporters – on an almost daily basis. Last Thursday (10th March), BBC weather reporter Carol Kirkwood used the phrase "High pressure systems and isobars not behaving".

Most high pressure systems are man-made and man manipulated.

The more powerful of the HAARP/NEXRAD systems can rapidly heat targeted areas the ionosphere, and the rapidly expanding hot air is directed downwards to cause an high pressure system that can cover an area with a 500 mile radius – as you can see and calculate from the video below. Basically, they can create high pressure systems to cover the whole of the UK, or the high pressure system that has been static over Greenland for over 2 years.

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Gv14LcPAJEY>

The (almost) natural low pressure systems build up in power because they have been stopped, broken apart or diverted and sprayed with condensation nuclei to increase cloud moisture density (to stop rainfall). The resultant unnatural concentration of heavy metal condensation nuclei causes massive storms and huge increases in lightning strikes.

2. For a few hours on Thurs 3rd March, the average temperature for the Northern Hemisphere breached 2°C above "normal" for the first time in recorded history.
3. The Arctic is melting fast, and there is much talk about "Refreezing the Arctic". So, they intend to increase the spraying of materials that are toxic to humans and the environment. As if the resources needed (planes, equipment, and manufacture of ingredients) will themselves not create extra pollution and global warming.

There are currently over 150,000 methane seeps in the Arctic. Some of them are over 100 sq km. Mars has 95% CO2 in a considerably thinner atmosphere, but this is enough to send temperatures from -125°C at night to +20°C at day...every day. Methane only needs to be at 0.8% of our atmosphere to have the same effect.

Probably like most who come to this site, I seriously doubt that any attempt to refreeze the Arctic Ocean would come to a good end. But, in the meantime, man is making hay while the sun shines in the Arctic. According to an article in the Los Angeles Times this morning, "Polar snorkeling is the latest shore excursion offered by a small-ship cruise line that sails to northern Norway and Greenland. Aurora Expeditions, based in Australia, offers the Arctic snorkeling option for those who want to see sea anemones, urchins and crabs." You can't even make this stuff up.

So many beloved little creatures are dying now...I especially mourn the honeybees, who do only good...they pollinate flowers and make honey. And are being purposely killed by all the pesticide stuff/neonicotinoids. It's getting to the point where I am so sick of all this purposeful evil killing of our planet that I would not mind joining the honeybees one day.

And just read about the purposeful killing of the Iditarod dog teams (one fellow on this list was talking about how dangerous the race is this year because of lack of snow & a dangerous gorge). And now we have snowmobilers attacking other teams on purpose. Report below (what new levels of madness is our world reaching?):

"One dog is dead, and others have been injured after a snowmobile reportedly drove into two separate dog teams competing in the Iditarod. Officials in Alaska say the incidents were intentional.

A statement from the Iditarod Trail Committees says the snowmobiler attacked racer Aliy Zirkle's team and then Jeff King's team later. One of King's dogs was killed in the incident.

"He went by at 80, 90 mph, never slowed down. His snow machine cowling flew off, and he was gone," King told KNOM public radio. "It really felt like reckless bravado and playing chicken."

Officials say a suspect has been identified and an investigation has begun. Both Zirkle and King will continue racing, with King telling a reporter, "I'm not gonna let this schmuck take anymore of the fun away."

Linda, as bad as neonicotinoid pesticides are, the far more overarching and verifiable reason for bee mortality and colony collapse is aluminum-based nanoparticulate aerosols that are undermining bees' ability to navigate and function. Much like Alzheimer's in humans. There is a peer-reviewed study searchable online that focuses on this scenario and came to shocking conclusions that undeniably indict geoengineering (SRM/SAG) as the culprit.

It seems that TPTB and others who have vested interests cannot pollute the earth enough. I remember reading how the rain forests of Puerto Rico were being monetised in that if it could be shown that medicines could be derived from the living botanicals, then preservation against logging would occur. Isn't this incredible? The forests have to be proven to be financially advantageous in one way to avoid being chopped down and burned up. What about their intrinsic value as part of a complex, ancient and utterly life supporting natural ecosystem?

How can we take the corruption out of money? Because it seems that everyone who has sold their grandmother already is looking at selling anything they can get their hands on. And when we have sold everything then we can be beggars begging from each other. Money as the goal is destroying us. Power as the goal is allowing TPTB to destroy us. They have monetised us and the system has run dry, with endemic debt now unserviceable.

A vast parochialism has us blind to thoughts of alternative ways to live. When things get harder we adapt and work harder to cope. But we don't stop and ask about the fundamentals of those systems that determine how we live our very lives. Those at the top know this. That's why politicians preach jobs! jobs! jobs! at every election as if there are any jobs now in the global West to be plucked from thin air.

They don't say: Let's accomplish real monetary reform and return the issuance of money to every nation's sovereign and elected government. Or: Let's achieve real national security and be self sufficient nationally. Or: Let us make peace with the rest of the world and support each nation in its fulfillment of real prosperity. I could go on with many other examples.

As Dane has become more politically aware (without allegiance to a particular party), so must we become more savvy across all of the pertinent issues and subjects that have become the dominion of TPTB. We can become our own reliable experts.

HAARP Evidence for Fukushima Meltdown from the HAARP Report:

This shows very strong evidence that the Alaska Haarp was involved in the Fukushima "9.0" earthquake/Tsunami/nuclear meltdown. At the very same time, as the Haarp signal was building up energy, from March 8 to March 11, the Demeter satellite detected "a big increase in infrared emissions from above the epicentre, which peaked in the hours before the quake. In other words, the atmosphere was heating up."

This kind of heating is exactly what would be expected, from Haarp energy flowing into that area, just before the earthquake. This is a powerful confirmation of the magnetometer data in this video! The above quote came from this Russian/US research paper: <http://www.technologyreview.com/view/...>

Here is a likely motivation for the attack on Fukushima, which happened one year before the Fukushima meltdowns:

"Japan makes uranium offer to Iran"

<http://www.insidejapantours.com/japan...>

The magnetometer data, shown in this video, is no longer available, as the server mysteriously went offline in October, 2012. It has not come back up, even though the internet DNS is still trying to load the server. The ICC, and all international police agencies, need to take a look at this, and consider if such criminals should still be allowed to be in charge of these geoengineering programs, which are rapidly killing our planet.

It is really amazing how the Bible is telling us everything before it happens. But, I never would have thought that our government is the most evil government in history, and they would have the audacity to do what their doing!!! Makes me very mad!! Told my brother who owns several thousand acres of farmland, showed him pics, and as he's out a lot and depends on the weather for crop cultivation, said he never saw any planes spraying. So I educated him, don't know if he really believed, but at least he is aware now. I'll keep praying and ask God to intervene, but prophetically this has to happen. I've been keeping sort of a chemtrail diary. The days we have clear skies (which are few and far between) my husband and I both feel fine. We can work out in the yard, etc..with no problems.

A few days later, bam! Spraying out the wazoo. The both of us got sick. I got terrible body aches. I felt like I was 90 years old. My husband is hit differently, he's sneezing and hacking like someone who has lung cancer.

I've spoken to several people in my region who are experiencing seriously high blood pressure spikes and asthma. My own doctor told me she's seen an increase in patients with lung problems where they didn't exist before.

Heart palpitations, fast pulse, an abnormal redness to my skin like I'm flushed— ALL signs of barium toxicity; then my M.D. wanted to know how I could tell I'm being exposed— REEALLY? Now, you can supplement with potassium and it helps somewhat, but what we're getting sprayed with ain't baking soda. WHY DON'T PEOPLE GET TESTED for barium? Are the docs refusing to do this? Are all the labs fudging results, giving false levels or outright refusing to test, for god's sake? I have to be very careful where I lay my head at night because I can't be exposed to it too much. Buildings in which I am going to be able to sleep have to have very securely-closing doors and windows without leaks. I just can't explain this to the people around me who do not understand that in fact we ARE being sprayed with toxic metals, they're breathing it too, and I am especially sensitive to barium— never mind I've actually been hospitalized with barium poisoning; they just stare at me like I'd just told them that their mother is in reality a child-eating She-Devil... My own house just ain't so good at keeping it out and sadly, being single and just a music teacher at a time when employment's really up-and-down, I'm afraid it's going to be too costly for me to mitigate this to the degree that I really need. Hope that changes, praying for a miracle...!

Scientific American: Crippled Fukushima Reactors Are Still a Danger, 5 Years after the Accident Japan's citizens, and scientists worldwide, do not have answers to basic health and environment questions

By Madhusree Mukerjee on March 8, 2016

... The 1,000 or so tanks of contaminated water, which leak from time to time, pose another headache. Tepco is removing the most abundant contaminant, cesium, from the cooling water before it is sent to the storage tanks, but the water retains high concentrations of radioactive strontium and tritium. This February, the company reported a spike in strontium levels at the plant site—likely indicating a tank leak. So the company is painstakingly cleaning the stored water of all radionuclides except tritium, which is difficult to separate out. Because tritium concentrations remain many times higher than the drinking water level prescribed by the World Health Organization, however, fishery cooperatives are not allowing its release into the ocean. (Tepco did not respond to Scientific American's questions about the tank contents, or anything else.)

Solid waste is piling up as well. Cleaning streets, houses and playgrounds within the evacuated zone, which stretches some 50 kilometers northwest of the plant site, has generated millions of bags of contaminated topsoil and debris, which also await a final resting place. Almost 800 bags got carried off by typhoon Etai last year, however, and were deposited miles away, says Hajime Matsukubo of the Citizen's Nuclear Information Center in Tokyo. Hundreds were never found. Meanwhile, after five years, some 100,000 people are still waiting to return to their homes.

It rained steadily and fairly heavily Thursday, then off and on again Friday, more and heavier rain returning late Friday and going most of the day Saturday. We've had at-times-heavy-ish rain here Sunday morning, and the forecast for the "scheduled" weather is for temps in the mid-80s later this week– Weather Whiplash!!– and no one so much as bothers to ask WHY, HOW is this now possible, they just continue to get through the day. Well, on a certain level, of course, we all have to, but there's so much more to spending whatever we have of our leisure hours by informing ourselves and becoming/remaining civically engaged. I'm wondering to what degree the storms now hitting CA are being "allowed" to bring rain/snow (generals in the military and the titans of corporations want to take their grandkids skiing again, and they want their golf courses GREEN!!!); I'd like to know to what degree the frequently-noticed "heat bubbles" coming after precipitation "events" are a result of H.A.A.R.P.-run shenanigans– anybody able to answer that one?

the animals are being horribly affected as well as people. Big horn sheep dying from pneumonia. Hemorrhagic disease in deer. they bleed to death inside. blue tongue. whales and fish dying. birds dying. bee's bugs and people. all related to this spraying i am certain! people make excuses for it and won't believe it could be from the toxic soups being dumped on us. it is all related! they blame the hobby farmer with sheep and goats for sickening the Big Horn Sheep. That's a bunch of b.s. always excuses that wipe out farmers and ranchers without them admitting they are the ones causing it.

Add to the animal destruction the destruction of plants, trees, food production. if they don't stop their spraying soon there won't be much left alive.

Thank you Dane, for the most intense weekly alert broadcast yet. I salute your broad knowledge, wonderful courage and commitment to exposing the deadly, but hidden-in-plain-sight threats that this once-beautiful planet now faces. You have an international audience, and I pray that the numbers of aware people will grow every day. Cutting through the willful, even criminal, blindness of those who should know better is a hard road, but if you, and all of us, do not keep on walking that road, the deadly rain that's gonna fall will be a hell of a lot harder. I have tried, and will continue to try, to awaken my friends and family, and strangers I meet, to these dire problems. I'm an old musical type, and one of the ways I hope to get the message out is in song.

Yes, indeed, it is almost incomprehensible how even those who are regarded to be highly educated, or intelligent, or workers in the fields of health, science, environment, etc., etc., etc., are completely blind and ignorant of what is going on over their heads and in their faces. but the reality is that there are many people who are honestly lost in ignorance and lack of awareness. I have a sibling—a highly trained, highly educated medical professional who spends a great deal of time outdoors—who had absolutely no awareness or knowledge of these insidious programs until I introduced the issue and provided some reading material and a Dane dvd. For those of us who have awakened to the reality of the scale and dimensions of the ongoing assault upon this planet, it would be helpful to remember we were once blind and ignorant to many of these issues before the proverbial "scales fell from our eyes". I personally need to remember my own advice as I often fall into a "holier than thou" , judgmental attitude when dealing with the truly blind, deaf, and ignorant. On the other hand the shills, agents of deception and disinformation, and perpetrators of this evil crap are in a completely different category, and need to be dealt with "differently" than those with basically, "good heart" but who are unawakened and ignorant. That is all I have to say....

It's just so much more effective actually to silence dissenters like Andrew Breitbart and Matt Simmons using the Heart Attack machine treatment that was brought out in videotaped testimony as part of the Church Committee hearings in the Senate back in the 70s that strove to dig deeper into the underpinnings of the Water Gate mess, which was kinda like trying to stop a volcano from erupting by investigating a fumarole... In listening to semi-mainstream coverage (NPR, Democracy Now etc.) on the 5 yr. anniversary date of the Fukushima disaster, you would think that nothing of lasting importance had actually happened at the nuclear power plant! All the coverage was of the earthquake and tsunami. The human interest angles were all about people wishing they could have re-built sooner and businesses re-building and "doing better than ever" after 5 long years. Some stories had not a mention of the nuclear meltdown, radiation, decimation of ocean and land animal populations, food contamination, or cancer rates and other health issues rising off the charts. What a bunch of worthless journalists and what a disservice to the world! I could hardly believe it...but then I quickly remembered the dystopian world we are living in!

That's Sam Carana's site, isn't it? I had people saying to me, "OK, so we face runaway warming and total extinction – but what do you want us to do with this information?"

I relayed the question to Sam Carana, since I was linking to his blog. He referred me to his action plan. I looked at it. Along with reducing emissions, it listed 'relocating' the methane deposits. I asked what this meant, but my comment was not approved.

Destroy the methane deposits, freeze them, oxidise them – these can make some sort of sense. But relocate them?

His site also makes no mention of climate engineering, probably for fear of losing 'credibility'. By now, it is too late in the day to mess about. People need to understand that action is being taken, and the destructive nature of it.

Nuclear Power in China
(Updated 7 March 2016)

Mainland China has 30 nuclear power reactors in operation, 24 under construction, and more about to start construction.

Additional reactors are planned, including some of the world's most advanced, to give more than a three-fold increase in nuclear capacity to at least 58 GWe by 2020-21, then some 150 GWe by 2030, and much more by 2050.

The impetus for increasing nuclear power share in China is increasingly due to air pollution from coal-fired plants.

China's policy is to have a closed nuclear fuel cycle.

China has become largely self-sufficient in reactor design and construction, as well as other aspects of the fuel cycle, but is making full use of western technology while adapting and improving it.

China's policy is to 'go global' with exporting nuclear technology including heavy components in the supply chain.

You might want to research info about Fukushima's untold story. It has been thoroughly exposed that it was NO accident. It was a deliberate sabotage for such destruction to happen.

As for China's foray into nuclear energy development, US scientists had patented closed-loop nuclear power systems way back in the early 1980s and it was all vetoed by Jimmy Carter and swept under the rug. Now, how did China re-discover this technology?

[Ionospheric heaters and transmitter technology is plasma physics.]

Physics of the Plasma Universe

Anthony L. Peratt / Second Edition / Springer 1992, 2015

Plasma is today recognized as the key element to understanding new observations in near-Earth, interplanetary, interstellar and intergalactic space, stars, galaxies, clusters of galaxies and throughout the observable universe. The text, 'Physics of the Plasma Universe' is the result of Anthony Peratt's 37 years research at Lawrence Livermore and Los Alamos National Laboratories, and the U.S. Department of Energy. The supercomputer and experimental work was carried out within university, National Laboratory, Department of Energy and supporting NASA facilities.

Anthony L. Peratt makes it clear that he is in no way connected to the Electric Universe people, even though they use and quote his research: "...now the internet allows anyone, even cults, to present their cacophony to the world, often citing unsuspecting researchers as 'colleagues' for false endorsement. As Hannes Alfvén, Harold Urey, and myself ... said 'they deserve no attention'. ..."

[Here are a few illuminating quotes from Peratt's text, 'Physics of the Plasma Universe']:

* Plasma consists of electrically charged particles that respond collectively to electromagnetic forces.

* Because of their strong interaction with electromagnetism, plasmas display a complexity in structure and motion that far exceeds that found in matter in the gaseous, liquid, or solid states.

* The term plasma came from medical science to describe their collective motions that gave an almost 'lifelike' behavior to the ion and electron regions.

* In addition to cellular morphology, plasmas often display a filamentary structure, which derives from the fact that plasma, because of its free electrons, is a good conductor of electricity, far exceeding the conducting properties of metals such as copper or gold. [No wonder the Department of Energy is keenly interested in Peratt's research!]

* Nearly all the matter in the universe exists in the plasma state.

* Plasmas are prodigious producers of electromagnetic radiation!
