We recruit from among the best people in military and civil aviation, plus business, to bring them together in a team that values the individual but which thrives through collaboration, working together to achieve a common success.

Civilians, the RAF and Sponsored Reservists standing together

AirTanker blends together civilians, RAF and Sponsored Reservists in the workplace in support of Voyager. We offer a rich variety of opportunities from engineers, pilots and flight operations teams, underpinned by regular support services.

This mixed manning approach gives us the flexibility to deploy operational teams in support of RAF Voyager around the globe.

Irrespective of their background, civilian or military, all of our people share a common commitment to delivering service excellence to the RAF. For our part, AirTanker is equally committed to its people, supporting them in their personal and professional development.

Going global

AirTanker is about much more than the 'nine to five'. We will earn your commitment, offering you a unique opportunity to play a crucial part in a pioneering service that is working to deliver unparalleled support to the RAF and UK armed forces.

While we have a huge variety of roles permanently based here at the AirTanker Hub at RAF Brize Norton, others could give you an opportunity to see the world. Flying from Calgary to the Falklands, we have a host of different roles that give our people an opportunity to travel. This includes civilian cabin crew and pilots, engineers and other operational supporting roles from Flight Operations to Human Resources.

'Social network'

Working with like-minded people, you'll also find a warm welcome here at the AirTanker Hub. We have an annual diary of organised events from family days and summer festivals to a social scene that has gone from strength-to-strength as we have grown.

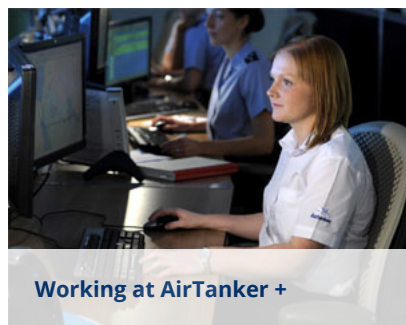

AirTanker also offers a broader educational programme, which includes amongst other activities, battlefield tours designed to build understanding of military culture and the proud history of UK Armed Forces.
